City Debt-Construction Bonds-The Pirst Step Towards Bankraptey.

A Wair.—On Saturday a gentleman passing down State street, near Madison, with an active terrier dog, observed the animal in the course of a rat-hunt under a pile of lumber, drag out a parcel. On being examined it was found to contain the remains of an infant, wrapped in brown paper. Coroner James held an inquest, but nothing was developed as to the matter,

From the suddenness of his death some suspicions of foul play were excited, and the matter coming to the ears of the Coroner an inquest and post-mortem was held on Saturday. The cause of death fully shown to be inflammation of the bowels.

Such has been the expense of New York; such will be ours if we adopt this rainous system in carrying out our city improvements.

We trust our Common Council will remember that they are the representatives of the seamp for some time to come.

We trust our Common Council will remember that they are the representatives of the tax-payers and not of the contractors. The dissatisfaction of the party in consequence of the Times' policy touching the late Judicial election, is said to be at the bostom of the movement now on foot. But there are acider sores than that, which have lately been touched anew. The unanimity with which the Democratis fereabout came up to the support of Dongias, in opposition to the Administration, burried off a great many men win could not restat the rush made by Mr. Douglas friends. They are arxious, though tominally in the Douglas ranks, for a reconsillation with the body of the party. They have been dissatisfied with the course of the East, from the first. They deprecate its constant attacks upon the Domocratic organization, which make it more a personal than a party organ; and they appear to be ready for a change. Pride forbids their going over to the views of the Herald; although those views are not inconsonant with their own. All such will support the new enterprise, as a compromise, though we doubt if there are many short-lived, weak and venomous.

Lake street sidewalks on these summy April moras and afternoons, are aglow with bright silks and brighter eyes. Portmounaies of pearl and silver, clasped in dainty gloved tingers, lined within with crisp bank notes, frem paps, or from "Alfred" or "Charles" to their young wives. Femiuine humanity in calico, and feminines in bressade; in capes mink and sable, and in furs for the yielding whereof, the 'possum of Indiana "came down," never to return again—in earriages, or on foot, they pour down the aidewalks and futo the stores of our smiling merchants, on that one purpose bent, which covers many—shopping.

We do not propose to ask the masculine readors attention, for an instant, to the question. Of course, the man who goes patiently shopping all day with his wife or sister, has not yet doclared himself, for awe of the vigorous hunt of Barnum and Colouel Wood; but there is a view of the case which is of general interest, and it is, that taken as an indication, our "shopping" tokens of the present apring are welcome signs to more than the merchants.

And in this view. The trade with the wholesale house and the jobber is aimply apeculative and house and the jobber is aimply apeculative and house and the jobber is aimply apeculative and Ross & Co.,) shown their monthly account of sales since their first open-ing in this city. It was singular to observe how faithful the figures were, as a record or financial barometer of the times, making all allowance for the natural progress of the house in favor and in trade.

We could read when the "Panie" struck the city in the fall of 1857, from the great decline in a single month in their sales, and how for months after, the depression kept possession of the purse strings, or rather the empty purses.

By this standard, and it is sustained by the evidence of other retail houses, there is a return to the heavy sales and brisk business of "better times." All concur in the statement of an excellent spring trade.

Pursacus and Vusytiaarios.—Eds. Press and Technicas:—In the communication of Mesurs. R. T. Crane & Bro., of pesterday, they say: "With air furnaces, the air is generally heated in heasement from iron surfaces, six tempoesture of about 1,000 degrees, more or less." This may be the case in the common furnaces without ventilation, but in "Sawyer's Ventilating Furnace, the current of fresh air from out door is very much accelerated by constantly pumping from the rooms the vinited air and impure gases. By this means the air is not allowed to remain in contact with the heating surface, but passes rapidly by it, and an abundant supply of moderately heated air is thus secured. This also prevents the radiating surface from hecoming as highly heated as in not air furnaces here-tofore used. Thus, by our furnaces, a constant circulation of air is kept upin the apartments by withdrawing, at or near the floor, all the impure and colder air, and supplying its place by fresh air moderately heated. Is there any suchehange of air in rooms bested by theirs? We say again that it is impossible to ventilate effectually a room heated by steam, unless the draft in the flue is produced by a separate fire or by increases the expense. We produce the same thing by one fire, and without any waste of heat.

At the close of their communication your correspondents ask, "Is it not true that it (meaning Lesier & Co. "furnaces at the High School), has failed to give perfect satisfaction, and that, has been proposed to take ton the furnace and replace it by steam, but it has performed all it was expected to do to the full and entire satisfaction of all concerned, for the truth of which statement we refer to Wm. Now will Mr. Douglas and his friends be content wish the degradation which conces-sion to Southern demands would fasten upon them? We have no arched idea of the value content with the degradation which concession to Southern demands would fasten upon them? We have no exalted idea of the value of their free-soil professions, but unbounded confidence in the correctness of their mixing of self-preservation; hence we believe that they will not dare yield. They will have no alternative; thus must resist. Compliance will be equivalent not only to defeat but to destruction. Resistance is defeat also, but not a surrender of all homesty and self-respect. On the other hand, we do not see how the South can recode. When it was decided in Washington that Brigadier General Angustas Gresar Dodge, Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of Madrid, should have leave to retire, Brigadier General George Wallace Jones, bestirred himself to seize the succession. His friends in Iowa went to work and got up a pronunciamento, signed by hundreds of the faithful, demanding the place for him. It was presented to Mr. Buchanan, who cocked his event the presented. hanan, who cocked his eye at the precious occurrent, and cut discussion off by declaring out that mission was not for any of the Jones that this mission was not for any of the Jones ripe. BY THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE, Anousurus Grann Junus.—There has lately been a good deal of discussion, in the press and out of it, in respect to the policy of dispensing with the agency of grand juries in our criminal jurispradence, and the project was greeted with pretty general favor. Many excellent reasons were readily given for the change, and not a fow abuses incident to the grand jury system forcibly pointed out. But a serious difficulty has been discovered. Grand juries cannot be so easily set aside as some people imagined, for the fifth article of the amendments to the constitution of the United States contain the following provision: BEST BLANK BOOKS. JONES, PERDUE & SMALL, ing provision:

No person shall be beld to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless at a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the landor nextle forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in times of war or public danger."

This settles the question. We must bear with grand juries a while longer.—Nos Tork Tones. WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN STATIONERY, BLANK BOOKS, Fig. 1. Aurora (Ia.) Commercial relates the following incident connected with the late steamboat collision near that place:

One young man, a few minutes before the collision, was holding forth on infidelity, and a soon as the secident occurred, he was most reciferous in celling on his Maker to preserve his life. And he actually had in his hand, when here to illustrate acred which he was just ready to play when the disaster arrested the game. BUTLER & HUNT, 48 State st., DOTATO DEPOT .-

That the several Bridge Tenders, he had section, named, shall be allowed the full tract from the New York Tribuse of the 7th;

"The production of Butter, the past season, was considerably more than an average, especially Onto and Illinesis, which is estimated to have exceeded in quantity one-third more than any of the three previous years. The price of this grade declined to a very low rate as easy as June last, and remained so all through the season, atthough its cheapness induced shipments to ill tections wherever Butter could be sold; at the sold as Greate Butter. The production of New York State was more than was anticipated, and the supposition of a light production of this grade caused a heavy but disastrous speculation to its authors. One important fact ought to be mentioned, though not apt to be thought of in speculative assessons, that when Dairy Butter is $12,500 in our market, it materially diminishes the consumption of the acticle, above 20,621c is over its actual value. There appears to be a wider variance in price between poor and fine grades every successive year. BY TELEGRAPH. We have received dates from Vera Crus to be first inst, via Ministian. Miranon appeared before Vers Crus on the ste uit, with an advance guard of 300 men.
